URGES CHURCH BOOM

SOCIETY LAX, HE DECLARES

Cannot Afford to Leave People Without Places of Worship and Should Build Them in Communities that Fail to Do So, Author Tells Episcopalians—Bishop Harding Speaks.

"Society cannot afford to leave people outside the church," declared Thomas Nelson Page last night in a speech on "The work of the church in the city" at the Episcopal diocesan convention in St. Mark's Church.

"I believe in giving toward the missionary cause," said Mr. Page. "And I think we should continue to give, and that our giving should know no bounds. Foreign mission is a good thing, but there is much to do at home, and the city is the place where real financial aid is needed. Here in the city where there are so many churches, people in certain sections never enter a house of worship. If such sections of our city are unable to support a church, then it is the duty of the more fortunate sections to provide temples and ministers for them. Society can well afford to support sanctuaries and temples for people to worship in."

An All-around Missionary.

Mr. Page said he had always been a strong advocate of home missions, and believed in going to the physical relief whenever necessary, though he thought material help is best done by charitable organizations.

Blair Lee spoke on "The work of the church in the counties," and declared that an exodus from the rural districts since the civil war has made it difficult to maintain churches in some sections of the diocese.

"The work of the church in the suburbs" was the subject of Arthur S. Browne's address. Mr. Browne stated that the most difficult problem of the suburb is to build churches fast enough to meet the growing demand. He told how the city is encroaching upon the suburb and how the situation must be met.

Parish Delegate Report.

The evening session was opened with a prayer meeting, followed by reports of the delegates from the different parishes. The matter of raising more money for the missionary cause was discussed.

The convention opened at 10 a. m., and reports of the secretary and treasurer were heard. There was holy communion at 11 a. m., after which the bishop made an address on the work to be done in the next year.

A luncheon was given the clergy and delegates from out of town at the Naval Lodge Hall.

Bishop Harding Speaks.

In his speech at the afternoon session Bishop Harding made a plea for a board of censors for moving-picture theaters. He said that at the recent annual meeting of the Friendly Society it was brought out that a recent investigation of the shows disclosed many pictures unfit for boys and girls to see. He pointed out that under the present laws a show might go on un molested until it reaches a point where it shocks the modesty of the police.

He called upon Episcopalians to urge members of the House committee to report at once on the Sunday rest bill.

The idea of appointing an archdeacon for the diocese of Washington was commented upon by the bishop, who said two archdeacons might be appointed—one for Washington and the suburbs, and one for the parishes of Southern Maryland.

Funeral of Blind Founder.

The body of Frank E. Cleveland, the blind founder and president of Columbia Polytechnic Institute for the Employment of the Adult Blind, who died Monday at his home, 188 H street northwest, of paralysis, was taken yesterday to Falls Village, Conn., his old home, for burial. Services were held at the family residence, Rev. Dr. Samuel H. Woodrow, pastor of First Congregational Church, officiating.
